

On a trip to Dublin, Australian Chris Harrison falls head over heels in love with Daniela, an Italian girl with eyes the colour of Guinness- and he follows her home. He abandons his previous life for La Dolce Vita, with its luscious foods and sun-drenched vistas. Among olive groves and cobblestone lanes, Chris takes us on a moving, insightful and often hilarious journey into the heart of southern Italy...

'Many have written books about their experiences living in foreign climes but few have done it as entertainingly, beautifully and -surprisingly-romantically as Harrison does here.' SYDNEY MORNING HERALD
